AFFAIRS IN UTAH.—The Vilete, published at Salt Lake City, is waging an unceasing warfare against the Mormons. It seems confident of success. It says:

"There has been a time extending through a period of eight or ten years, during which the will of one man was well nigh sure him in Utah. That time is past, never to return. The reign of the Autocrat of Polygamy is over. The star of his destiny is declining."

In the same number it notices an institution—the Sacerdotal Guard—the existence of which is probably not known to most of our readers. We quote:

"The viletzas who are early risers may always see no living persons in the low and mean—but with few of mankind's prominent attributes or lofty sentiments, & they could not bring themselves to submit to the desecration—skulking home, from the moral and degrading service of guarding the harem of the chief degraded of women in Utah, while the grand Bashaw-lambs in that undivided place where crushed hearts are imprisoned, and woman's fond aspirations blighted!"

In another column it gives the following instance as a proof that, though Mormonism fills the nursery, it does not proportionately increase the resources of the pocket:

A morning at C.ville, Summit county, forty miles from here, had two "babes" born to the other night, by two of his wives, with just forty minutes difference between the infants ages! But what's the worse about it? Barbarous us is the tone of those who say the other's mother—not an uncommon thing in Utah! The "happy ones" have been here with the Saints full six or seven years, working like a beehive, and yet they have an adobe cabin, (with only one bed in it,) and a garden patch as the result of their boasted Utah enterprise. That's all that's left from the yearly tithe—baring the babies.

There is a portion of the Mormon fraternity, out in the far West under the lead of Joe Smith's son, who revere the peculiar doctrine of the Utah "Saints," and Brigham Young is the bugaboo.

GOVERNOR PEIRPOINT.—While in Washington last week we called upon President Johnson and asked him the direct question what he thought of the wisdom and propriety of adopting our constitutional amendment disuniting the Rebels. The substance of his answer is this, that if the Union men of West Virginia thought there was danger of the State Government getting into the hands of continuationists and reunionists it was right to disassociate itself, but that there was no danger of this, then, of course, the measure was unnecessary; and he would not recommend us to adopt it. But he said it was a local question of the wisdom of which the Union men of the State should be their own judges.

We had also the pleasure of meeting Governor Peirpoint. The Governor said: "The great issue before the people of the United States, so far as reason can make obvious, or shall it remain as much respectable?" The late rebels, he said, "were doing all in their power to make it honorable in order to save them a little of their poverty from receiving the brand of infamy." The Copperheads, he continued, "were also trying to make treason respectable, for if it is made odious and dishonorable on the page of history, they who sympathized with the rebellion will share in its disgrace."—Fairmont (W. Va.) Vilete.

Unseating members.

[From N. Y. Com. Advertiser, Rep.]

Congress is acting with shameful partizanship in unseating members who claim seats—disgrace it as they will, it is believed that these changes are made for purely partisan purposes. In the case of Mr. Stockton the necessity of his displacement is almost openly urged on party grounds, and the manner in which it was accomplished yesterday is simply disgraceful.

The House has already sent Mr. Voorhees, and with him the inevitable blow which Mr. Brooks is to go. Congress, or rather the dominant party, is setting a precedent that will surely plague the minority. Can not it be learned that honesty and fair dealing haven't gone out of vogue? Does the majority insist upon a dead level of conformity? If they fear the ability of the men whom they seek to displace, let them do it in the open.

In this thing continues, we shall offer great inducements to Tailors, as we intend to keep good trimmings, and sell the same.
